'ARLINGTON, MASS., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1914.

TO THE VOTERS OF

29th Middlesex Representative District.

GENTLEMEN:—It is with gratitude and deep appreciation of the responsibility as well as the honor conferred upon me at the election on November 3, that I return thanks to the voters of Lexington and Arlington. Earnest and faithful work by the Republican Town Committees, and enthusiastac rallying to their support, has reversed the verdict of a year ago and made a Republican your representative.

Again I thank you; but as a representative of Arlington and Lexington, no interest of either town will fail to receive my earnest effort to safe-guard the same.

Yours respectfully,

Arlington, Noy. 5, 1914.

JACOB BITZER

EDITOR:-

Permit me, through the columns of your esteemed paper, to express my heart-felt thanks to the voters of the eighth district, early Tuesday morning and killed. through whose support my election to Congress was accomplished. I feel deeply grateful to those Progressives who placed their confidence in me and my principles rather than in party name. I owe much to the Republicans, especially the members of the city and town committees, for their excellent support during the campaign.

As a member of Congress I shall endeaver to serve my constituents faithfully and honestly, and shall especially strive to secure legislation that will benefit Massachusetts and New England.

FREDERICK W. DALLINGER.

Lady Paget Heading American Women In London Relief Work.

LADY ARTHUR PAGET.

One of the most important London movements for the relief of sufferers through the European war is that headed by prominent American women and known as the American women's war relief fund. It was originated by Lady Arthur Paget, wife of Sir Arthur Paget, whose husband is a lieutenant general in the British army. Lady Paget is the daughter of the late Mrs. Paran Stevens, a New York society leader, and has been an important figure in British society for many years. She is very wealthy, owning much New York real estate. Her churttles are as notable as her splendid social functions She was a great favorite with the late King Edward and has always been much liked by Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary and other members of the royal family. Besides her husband she has three sons serving in the English army. Noted for her wit, beauty and savoir faire, any GUS AV JOHNSON. philanthropic project that receives her backing is sure to be popular The first meeting of the war relief fund, which was held in the big London drawing room of Mrs. W. B. Leeds, was attended by such Anglo-American social leaders as the Duchess of Markborough, Lady Randolph Churchill, Lady Lowther, Mrs., Lewis Vernon Harcourt and many others.

MOYEN AGE EFFECT.

A Youthful Frock Showing the Charming New Line In Dress.

Simplicity in style and cut in combination with the low waist line makes the essential feature of the moyen age idea, and this costume shows it.

The circular tunic flares most grace fully over the narrow two piece skirt, and the two materials are combined most successfully in the body portion.

The materials shown here are gabarfine and velvet, but broadcloth would be handsome treated in the same way.

The bound edges make an interesting feature, for bindings of silk braid are exceedingly smart this season.

For the sixteen year size the dress will require two and one-half yards of material twenty-seven inches wide, with three yards of velvet forty-four inches wide and ten yards of braid to make as illustrated

MARK THE FLARE.

All Fashionable Tailored Suits Have One This Season.

SILE AND WOOL SUIT

More women are interested in the tailored suit at this time of year than in any other style of dress. Every one must have a gown for the street, while only the few find the elaborate afternoon and evening frock a necessity. Suits this season are plain, but their chic is obvious in the line. There is a decided flare to tunics and skirts. The suit pictured here is of dark blue silk and wool mixture. It has a narrow foundation skirt and flaring tunic, the latter a continuation of the belted body of the coat. Dark blue velvet and bone buttons trim the suit.

Modish Blouses With Long Sleeves and Mannish Collars.

Satin overblouses and lace overblouses are the things. Some are even designed in odd, vestlike effects. Ilinit ed ruffles of chiffon or lace unite these to their chiffon under parts. *

For wear with the tailored gown there are excellent shirts of crepe de chine, tub silk or linen, buttoning up the front with small round buttons and made with rolled over, mannish looking collars, which also button in the front, and tightly too.

Long sleeves are a component necessity, but both sleeves and collar are made with pique collars and cuffs which may be detached and freshened. thus prolonging the service of the garment beyond the only too brief period which ordinarily belongs to such

For traveling or semiformal wear there are chic little waists of roman striped silks. These have white silk collars and cuffs and are most useful. Plaided velvet waists of wonderfully

CAPES ARE BECOMING They Suit Most Women the Secret of Their Great Popularity.

The cape has become a garment of elegance, whether it be fashioned of spotless, tailless ermine or its clever imitator, French coney, or of more commonly accepted taffeta, serge or velvet

Plush and velvet capes are the most popular types; furs the most costly: brocades and Byzantine embroidered silks a close second to the furs, which last, however, are always regally superior in any season, and taffeta and broadcloth The collar is of fur, of velvet, of metal lace or of satin, according to the material employed itn the making of the cape. It usually contrasts with that, not even excepting fur made wraps in these it is a chic conceit to model collars of wondrously colored velvets, which are in total harmony with the high lights or the deep nuances of the fur coloring. For fur and for velvet, plush or brocade wraps fur collars which hood the shoulders in close fitting, circular cut decisiveness are the most modish.

Long or Short Coats-Which?

A war is being waged between the short and the long suit coat. Dressmakers decree that it is the long coat which shall be worn, but nevertheless show their inconsistency by still clingng fondly to the short.

As a result many of the smarter costumes for formal occasions have jackets which extend no further than the waist line A compromise in the walking suit has been effected by the making of the coat long in back and quite short in front. Their skirts, as those of the dresses, are not standardized as to width

TROOPS AND MUSIC

Military Bands Are a Big Feature In the Russian Army.

OUTDO ALL OTHER NATIONS.

Besides a Brass Band Each Regiment Has a String and Wood Orchestra and a Drum Corps-Even Posts With Only a Battalion Have Full Bands.

One feature of the Russian army which from time to time has been brought to the attention of the world outside of Russia, chiefly by publications concerning themselves with matters appertaining to music, is the unusual size and number of bands in the military forces of the czar. The Russian soldier has more martial music than any other soldier in the world.

There is no regiment in the Russian service without its own band, and at posts where not a regiment but only a battalion is quartered that battalion has its band. And these Russian military bands are big and impressive musical organizations. Within each is a brass band and an orchestra of string and wood instruments with, of course, the necessary touch of brass and sheepskin. The result is that, while these military bands play primarily military music, they also adapt themselves to the performance of such music as the American hears at a symphony concert.

The regimental band in the United States army consists of thirty-six pieces, and bands on flagships of the navy are smaller. The average Russian army band, or orchestra, has from forty to fifty musicians, and the orchestras of certain guard regiments contain sixty. There are more than 1,000 Russian regiments, and there are in the army about 50,000 bandsmen. Then in the naval and military schools and in the navy there are bands, and if to these are added the twenty to forty musical pupils of a regimental orchestral school and the musical companies of battleships and various cadet schools the number of military musicians in the armed service of Russia mounts to the surprising total of approximately 100,000 men, a number greater than the whole enlisted and commissioned personnel in the Ameri-

Russia takes a commendable pride in its military bands, and the musiclans are all competent. The bandsmen are trained in the regimental band schools or in one of the numerous musical conservatories maintained by the government, and each musical company has a conductor and his assistant, both being graduates of one of the national conservatories of music.

The Russian designation of these military and naval bands is musykalnaya kammanda, and they constitute an important factor in the life of the civil population, the government using them for the entertainment of the public as well as for the musical education of the masses very much as the United States uses its military bands at Washington-that is, in providing free concerts for the people. Open air the larger towns and smaller cities throughout Russia during the summer, and in winter free recitals are given in the barracks and public halls. On Sundays, fete days and national holidays band concerts and orchestral performances are usual in the well settled regions of vast Russia.

The Russian military band is considerably more than an army institution. The cost of maintaining so many bands is considerable even for so rich a country as Russia, but the government considers them as a profitable investment. The Russian soldier has come to require music and he demands it, and these bands entertain the masses and the classes. These cities knows when music is good and he will have no other. 'The bands play the new and popular music by composers like Ivaneff, but on all the band programs you will see such names as Liszt, Schumann, Chopin, Tschaikowsky, Glinka, Strauss and Debussy.

The army band spreads its musical influence over Russia in another way. After passing through the regimental band school the bandsman serves three years. Then he passes out of the army, usually returning to his native village. The custom is for him to carry back into civil life with him the instrument he played in the government band. His musical training and accomplishment make of him in his home town a more prominent and important man than he otherwise Would be. He often takes up the teaching of music and almost invariably keeps up the practice of his art. Very likely he organizes a village band or orchestra, and into this come amateur musicians and other military bandsmen whose army service has expired. About 15,000 Russian army musicians annually leave the army and return home to their families .- Washington Star.

DEATH FOR SWEARING.

Profanity In the Early Centuries Was a Capital Offense.

Relieving one's mind in a profane way used to be a costly proposition. In the ninth century Justin an punished swearing by death. By the statutes of Donald VI. and Kenneth II. the north Briton had the effending member cut out when the tongue ran riot, Philip II. of France ordered those guilty drowned in the Seine, and the council of Constantinople excommunicated any one that swore heathen

In 1551 a man could swear in Scotland for 12 pennies per cuss. The higher you were in rank the more you had to pay for the privilege of oaths. Perhaps it was figured that the common people should be given wholesale

By an act of the sixth and seventh years of the reign of William and Mary servants, day laborers, common soldiers and common sailors were fined 1 shilling a swear; others were taxed 2 shillings. The swearing schedule in the household of Henry I. was 40 shillings fine for a swear word by a duke. 20 for a lord, 10 for a squire, 3s. 4d. for a yeoman and "a page to be whipt."

The law that provided fines for swearing led Jonathan Swift to his prospectus of the "bank of swearing" during the speculative craze at the time of the south sea bubble. This bank was to have a monopoly of collecting the fines of those who swore, and Swift said: "It is said there are 2,000,000 in the kingdom (Ireland), of which 1,000,000 are swearing souls. There are an estimated 5,000 gentlemen, and every gentleman can afford to swear one oath a day, which will produce 1.825,000 oaths a year, or £91,-

In 1592 at Aberdeen the council naively told the head of the house to have a box placed for the collection of the fines imposed upon the household for swearing.-Chicago Tribune.

HOW TO START A CANCER. Some Very Common Practices It Would

Be Well to Avoid. An English scientist, interested in the attempts to conquer cancer, suggests the following methods by which a cancer may be produced:

"It is not easy to produce a cancer artificially; nevertheless, if you try enough you will succeed sometimes. Encourage your patients to smoke clay pipes with the varnished ends broken off or to retain sharp edged stumps of teeth in their jaws, and you may fairly expect now and then to witness the de novo production of cancer. The same end may be attained with yet more certainty should you have it in your power to select cases for the experiment in which there already exists some local evidence of chronic iffication. For instance, you may tell a patient who has a little wart or an irritable crack in his lip that he may go on smoking and amuse himself by picking off the crust whenever he has a little spare time and come to you again in six months. This is a very certain method. In another instance you may assure a man with a little pimple near the angle of the eye that it is of no consequence, not worth an operation, and advise him to apply cold cream. In a year or two's time he will probably be able to show you a very interesting example of rodent ulcer (a form of so called skin cancer). It is obvious that the Englishman who suggests these methods does not offer them in the hope that they will be followed, but quite the contrary. He might have added that although "it is not easy to produce cancer artificially," it is still less easy to cure it, artificially or otherwise. Indeed, the fight against cancer has been one of the least suc cessful in the whole category of medical battles. It is also one of the oldest.

The 1914 Election.

The 1914 State election day came as a sort of culmination of three of the most ceive of,-bright sunshine, clear air and important factor in drawing out the vote year hence. but it was better and higher considerstions that this year brought out a vote, not often polled except at presidential elections. Early in the campaign it was evident that the people as a whole were bestowing thought and consideration on er, whose memorial statue has a conspicuthe issues developed in Congress the past out place on the State House grounds in year. As the canvass proceeded this interest deepened and it is many years since closing rallies held by the Republican sist of a parade, a public meeting in Treparty have been so largely attended or dominated by such confidence in success.

In Arlington this last attempt at in fluencing voters, on the part of Republicans, was held in G. A. R. Hall, on the evening of Oct. 30. The hall and adjacent rooms were filled with voters, and many stood during the two hours and more that the meeting lasted. Hon. J. Howell Crosby presided with grace and ture. skill. On the afternoon of the same date Gov. Walsh and Congressman Deitrick addressed a crowd assembled in front of Postoffice Building. Previously these gentlemen had addressed a group of people at Lexington.

At Lexington the closing rally was held in Town Hall and proved a phenominal success. In fact, it reminded one of the time when Gov. Robinson was candidate for his first term, -a hall full of enthusiastic partisans, music by a bunch of vocalists, and speaking that elicited rounds of applause. Mr. Bitzer, especially, made a fine impression.

On Tuesday morning Arlington voters flocked to the polls and at nine o'clock the registers on the ballot boxes showed the registers on the ballot boxes showed 1086 votes cast, a gain of 86 over last year at the same hour. At noon the figures were 1422 and when the polls closed the total was 2045, within 9 of the number cast at the presidential election. number cast at the presidential election. For once the vote in Arlington failed to be a barometer with which to forecast the result in the state. Few other cities and Town Hall without being proud of my or towns came up to this percentage, and the result was the defeat of Hon. Samuel W. McCall, the Republican candidate for Governor, by Gov. Walsh, whose plurality is given at 9,724. It is quite evident that a large number who last year voted for Mr. Bird, cast their votes this year for Gov. Walsh, but voted the rest of the Republican ticket, for the nominees of the Republicans, other than Mr. McCall, are all elected by large pluralities. Hon. Frederick W. Dallinger wins the seat in Congress from this District, Hon. Wilton B. Fay goes to the State Senate in place of his Democratic opponent, and Jacob Bitzer goes as Representative to the Legislature in place of Mr. Briggs, who defeated the Republican candidate last year.

The gigantic slump in the Progressive vote, shown in figures given below, was duplicated not only all over this state but in the country at large, Republicans making gains that landed Governors, Senators, Congressmen and other elective officers largely in excess of estimates made prior to the election. President Wilson rendered with precision and emphasis.

The vote in Arlington was declared at 5.50 o'clock as follows:-For Governor, McCall 1071, Walker 231, Walsh 714. The vote last year was Bird 743, Gardner 475, Walsh 583. For Lieut.-Gov., Cushing 1118, Barry 663. For Secretary, Langtry 1033, Doherty 681, Wood 260. These figures are sufficient to give an these activities form in the present thriving condition of our High school. Educators of Dallinger had 1115, Deitrick 786, Long 92.

there was a steady voting throughout the day. Lexington's registration is 1165 and the total number of votes cast was 916, divided as follows:—McCall 490. Walsh 294, Walker 114; for Lieut.-Gov., Cushing 503, Barry 264, McGinnis, 111; Sec'y of State, Langtry 468, Donahue clubs, the science clubs, the debating and 271, Wood 124; Congressman, Dallinger 516, Deitrick 300, Long 57; for Representative, Bitzer 412, McCarthy 285, Dallin 202. Lexington voted down the party tial attribute of a truly liberal education and enrollment statute by 484 against 198 in which, furthermore, keeps the student in favor. Vacations were voted laborers by 405 in the affirmative and 329 no, and the half-holiday was also granted them in a vote of 462 with 299 in the negative. Arlington cast the vote the same way, to put their ideals into effect. Just take a striking out party enrollment 1274 to 375, in favor of vacations 1252 to 559, halfholiday 1671 to 653.

Court, two candidates being Arlington well spent for every pupil to participate in some of these activities. men, -Jacob Bitzer, Cyrus E. Dallin, and Your communicant may not desire to have

John F. McCarthy, a Lexington man. Mr. Bitzer proved a skilled campaigner, was cordially received on every hand and secured a complimentary vote, carrying both towns. The totals are given below:

Last year the figures were Briggs 1053. Petree 828, O'Connell 727.

The failure to land Hon. Samuel W. McCall at the head of the poll was a disappointment to those who had noticed unmistakable evidence in the shifting of the political situation and felt certain the rising tide would overcome the avalanche of votes dumped on Republican candidates a year ago. Out from under emerged the whole state ticket, but there were many who could not refrain from giving a parting kick at the head of the ticket, and it goes under. The increase in the vote of Gov. Walsh over last year shows that some Bird men gave him their votes; that the Foss element of a year ago came to his standard, while his unusual campaigning ability counted for much. Arlington Hospital Sunday.

The appeal to the Churches of Arlington for a contribution to advance the is based on the amount of work done by the Institution since it was opened on March 1st, 1912. In two years and eight months seven hundred and twenty-nine patients have been treated and eightynine babies brought into the world.

The cost per patient, including a reasonable amount charged to depreciation of furnishings and equipment is $3.65 per day. Any patient paying less than this amount increases the deficit, which must be met by contributions and donations. Of the total number treated, 20 per cent have paid cost or more, 70 part cost and 10 percent have received free treatment.

Last year the total cost of the work done was $14,444.88 and our receipts for work done were $11,100.49, leaving a deficit of $3,344.88, which was met by contributions and donations. In addition to this amount, over $1,600.00 was spent on building and equipment, which was also met by subscription, making nearly $5,000.00 obtained in this way.

It will be necessary to raise about the same amount this year as last to meet the deficit in operating expenses and for some needed additions and repairs to building and equipment.

JONES WROTE POETRY.

And Laid a Layer of Bricks For Every Line He Composed.

Several years ago I wrote an essay for the Atlantic Monthly on "The Hundred Worst Books." For a place in the list I selected a book in my library en titled "Poems on Several Occasions," published in 1749 by one Jones, a poet whose name was unknown to me till I perused his verse. The pages were so fresh that I cherished the belief that I was the only reader in a century and a half. I had the pride of possession in Jones.

It was some time after that I came across, in Walpole's letters, an allusion to my esteemed poet. It seems that Colley Cibber, when he thought he was dying avrole to the prime minister "recommending the bearer, Mr. Henry Jones, for the vacant laurel. Lord Chesterfield will tell you more of him."

I was never more astonished in my life than when I visualized the situation and saw my friend Jones "the bearer" of a demand for the reversion of the laurenteship.

It seemed that Walpole was equally surprised, and when he next met Lord Chesterfield the eager question was, Who is Jones, and why should be be recommended for the position of poet laureate? Lord Chesterfield answered. "A better poet would not take the post, and a worse ought not to have it." It appears that Jones was an Irish bricklayer and had made it his custom to work a certain number of hours according to an undeviating rule. He would lay a layer of brick and then compose a line of poetry, and so on until his day's task was over. This accounts for the marvelous evenness of

This was but a small discovery, but it gave a real pleasure, for should I meet my Lord Chesterfield he and I would at once have a common interest. We both had discovered Jones, and quite independently.-Atlantic Monthly.

ONE VIEW OF BISMARCK.

His Love of Music and His Dislike of Wagner as a Man.

Talking of the arts Bismarck said: "Of music I am very fond, but now I have to abstain from hearing it because tears come only too readily into my eyes. My heart is stronger than my head. Indeed, what self control I other way, enabling the disk to be have has been bought by experience." Many instances occurred during our placed near the center. "No," he said, "not naturally; the iron I have created to use when necessary." And that I believe

I asked him if he knew Wagner personally. "Yes," he answered, "but it was quite impossible for me to care for him or to encourage his society. I had not time to submit to his insatiable vanity. Before breakfast, at breakfast, before and after dinner, Wagner demanded sympathy and admiration. His egotism was wearlsome and intolerable, and his demand for a listener was so incessant that I was obliged to avoid his company. I was too busy with my affairs to be able to give him all or even a portion of the demands he would have claimed upon my time. But I admire his music greatly, though # I have been compelled to give up going to the opera because the beautiful and touching melodies I cannot get out of my head; they cling to me, and I find it difficult to release myself from them, and now it tires me to be so much moved."-From "Conversations With Prince Bismarck," by W. B. Richmond, the English painter, in North American Review.

Wind Pressure.

A wind traveling at the rate of three miles an hour presses with a weight of about three-quarters of an ounce upon every square foot of surface which stands in its way. A wind of eighteen miles an hour gives a pressure of one pound and a quarter to each square foot, a wind of thirty-five miles an hour gives a pressure of six pounds on the square foot, a gale of fifty miles an hour thirteen pounds, a storm of seventy-five miles twentyeight pounds and a hurricane of ninety miles forty pounds on the square foot.

CURIOUS WAYS IN JAPAN.

Ine Thing In Particular That Pained a

the standardistic is always to be possible soft.

Visitor From Missouri I knew before I got here that Japan was queer, but I had no idea that everything was backward. I can't get used to sitting on the floor and sleeping with a tomato can with a napkin around it for a pillow. The easiest way to figure out how the Japanese would do a thing is to think what would be exactly backward in Missouri. When two Japanese meet they bow and bow, giving their heads short jerks as if trying to get salt water out of their eyes. When they separate they tip their hats. When they come into a store they tip their hats. When they buy a ticket they tip their bats. Their elbows are always bent toward Japanese never kiss. This pleasant pastime has not yet been imported into cherry blossom land. It is only recently that a few of the Japanese have learned to shake hands. We travelers are hoping that they will take up other great American institutions. Japanese look upon kissing as being low and vulgar, believing that a few moments spent in bowing is much better. The girls feel that way about it. too-they say.

When an ardent young Japanese suitor slips his arm around the girl's walst and whispers into her shell-like ear that she is the only woman who has ever understood him and when she looks up confidingly into his eyes and breathes "You are so strong!" he does not clasp her to his bosom in an ecstasy of joy and plant a delirious kiss on her trembling lips-no, instead of that he gets up and bows politely and thanks her in a few courteous phrases

One cannot help feeling sorry for them when thinking how many pleasant evenings they miss. From my limited experience I wouldn't give a good old fashioned Missouri kiss for ten minutes of bows. - Homer Croy in Lestie's.

Reversing a Phonograph Record.

A remarkably curious experiment may be performed with any ordinary phonograph. The sound box is reversed so that the needle slopes the turned backward by the finger being produced is extremely astonishing. You hear the human voice singing songs backward; you hear the harmony of Wagner backward-plain English sounds like a Chinese language. The most remarkable effect is perhaps to play a chime of bells in this reversed but there is never a single strike or clash of a bell. The strike on the ent is reversed and is nothing but a sharp "cessation of sound."-Strand Maga-

With the advent of the season of falling leaves with a suggestion of frost in the air, boop rolling and roller among children of the cities. In the country there are much more enjoyable ways of amusement. Take nutting, for example. City children seldom have a chance to roam the autumn woods in search of hickory nuts, shagbarks, chestnuts and other choice tree products that nature so pientifully provides in many parts of the country. So lacking these delightful expeditions to the woods, city children must be content with the parks and sidewalks for exercise and amusement. LOSING A GOLF MATCH.

Just a Little Lack of Concentration Once Defeated Travers.

Writing on golf in the American Magazine, Jerome D. Travers suggests that lack of concentration, particularly with reference to keeping one's eye on the ball, is the greatest cause of bad golf playing. He says that to practice concentration is very difficult, as he knows from personal experience. He then tells the following story showing how he lost a great match through this fault: "I know how hard this practice is. I have always thought that but for breaking this cardinal precept I might have had a very good chance to beat Hilton in 1911 at Apawamis-when the English champion carried away our chief amateur trophy.

"In the morning round over the first eighteen holes I had been playing badly and finished four flown. Every one, including Hilton, considered the match all in and over. But in the afternoon I started with a rush and won the first three holes, leaving myself only one down and well within reach. At the next hole I had an easy two foot putt to make to win my fourth straight hole and square the match.

"I have always thought that if I had made that putt the odds would have been in my favor. Now, in putting I make it a set rule to look at the ball until my club has struck the spot I am looking at. I have been able to do this by constant practice of concentration. But on this occasion I had a down hill putt, and I was overanxious. And just before my club struck the ball I looked up, pushed the ball to the right of the cup and missed the shot. This upset me for a moment, and I topped my skating are the sports most in vogue drive at the next hole, losing it. The combination, coming suddenly, restored Hilton's confidence, which had been ebbing away, and he got going again, with the result that I was beaten three and two!"

Mrs. Hannah Fifer, a widow, who earned her living by renting rooms for light housekeeping, had the reputation of being a shrewd manager and much inclined to carry economy to the farthest possible point. She was hardworking withal and seemed never to reach the end of her daily labor. On a certain day Mrs. Castle, one of the "light housekeepers," finding a surplus of time on her hands, kindly offered to help Mrs. Fifer out with her overflow of work.

"Well, if you feel like it, I wouldn't care if you'd take hold and bake me up a couple of pies," Mrs. Fifer conceded. "That'll belp me a lot. There's a bowl of apple sauce that I'm afraid won't keep if it ain't used soon." After Mrs. Castle had begun work Mrs. Fifer appeared with a supplemen-

Daffodils In Town

They Brought Back Memories of True Love.

By HENRIETTA CRAWFORD.

Everybody was sipping tea and nibbling cakes save Mildred. For her teaand cakes had no charm, perhaps because she had poured the one and dispensed the other steadily for the past garden she and her mother tended.

She leaned back in her chair behind the tea table absently watching the little crowd of fashionably dressed about the parlors, yet conscious nevertheless that the man beside her was observing her and enjoying her expe rience from his own standpoint, which was so different from her own that anything in her to interest him.

In a low voice he was telling her about the people before her eyes-how the woman in gray velvet had recently come into a fortune and how the giri in blue was sadly puzzled as to whether she would be happier with an American because she loved him or with an at Mildred and leaned toward Hills English eldest son because he was heir Hubbard. to a title.

She listened carelessly, scarcely replying. In reality her mind was busy with its own affairs. She was merely their hostess' country cousin who pour- Bertha Steaben marries the American ed tea and to whom Hills Hubbard was somewhat attentive.

"You must be very nice to him," Cousin Nell had advised the first day Mildred was in the house.

"And why?" the girl had inquired: "Because he is a good match, as good as there is to be had. That counts very much in my world, Mildred. It may be that you will charm him, being a type that he is unacquainted with."

Certainly it seemed that she had charmed him. Since the first day she met him he had been attentive to her. sending her flowers, taking her to ride in his motor and to lunch at the best

She had been quite frank with him from the first in spite of Cousin Nell, telling him that her father was only a poor country doctor and this was the first time she had been asked to visit her cousin.

As she leaned back in her chair she was wondering how it would seem to always have plenty of money, to buy one's frocks at the best shops, to live in a house where the work was done as by magic, to go about in a blue and gold motor and be able to hear all the instant.

Just that afternoon Cousin Nell had said when she came in to inspect her toilet:

"You understand, Mildred, that Mr. Hubbard will have something to say to In her yellow petticoat and her green you before you go home. There is but one answer for you to make, and I am sure he expects that one."

"But-but I'm not certain I care for him enough." Mildred had stammered. Nell had stared at her.

"My dear child! Do you think that any one in these days marries for love alone?"

"I didn't know," the girl said humelderly husband, who was seldom visible save at breakfast time, and the hitherto concealed reason for Nell's strange marriage was suddenly reveal-

Mildred had indeed experienced much since coming into her cousin's house. None of the golden rules which her parents had taught, her were applicable here. Other ideals were cherished, other aims kept in sight.

Her father and mother had married for love. Money they knew to be a great good without which one could yet be happy. The poorest person was as good as the wealthiest, provided he was of moral character. Yet, after all, when one was constantly meeting strangers how could one know more about them than their appearance revealed? Who cared whether Mrs. Poynter's first husband was living?

She was the wife of a notable rich man and very agreeable. In Harlin she would have been looked upon with suspicion, but here she was courted. Yes, money was a wonderful thing. . It brought one so much. Even if she did not love Mr. Hubbard she could no doubt be very happy with him. To be able to wear a dress like that gray vel vet and black furs with long silver hairs in them, each one of which rep resented a purseful of money, and ru bies like Mrs. Ogden's! The girl drew a long breath and stir red uneasily. What would her father and mother say? What would Tom think? She bit her lip as the memory of his brave yet tender face possessed her. She could almost hear him says

Now, look here, Daffy-Down Dilly, you are going up to town to visit your fine cousin, and slie'll have some felfow picked out for you, I know. He'll be rich and and different, and that will end my chance, which always was mighty poor, wasn't it, dear? If it wasn't you'd say one word, and then I wouldn't feel so entirely down as I will be if you go without saying it."

She had not said the word, and so she was quite free as far as Tom was concerned to marry Hills Hubbard if she chose. With a start she came back to reality and the sound of his voice.

deal of interest. But there is no doubt in my mind that the Englishman will win out."

"What makes you think so?" Mildred

"Because. That's a woman's reason. I know; but, as I say, it involves a good deal. The American, you see, has only his business prospects and for the present an average living. The Englishman has a fine old home, ancestry of the best, acres and tenants and a coronet about to descend upon his aristocratic head." *

Mildred sighed and looked again at the girl in blue. She was very pretty as she stood with her back to a great mass of daffodils particularly, but now something about them set her heart to beating quickly with memories of home. A month later there would be a great showing of them in the little The dear, dear things! Nell had ordered them simply because they looked well against the wall paper of her drawing room, but to Mildred's girlish men and women that were moving fancy they were vital, appealing. They meant home, the country, springtime yes, and Tom, walking toward her, his face full of joy at sight of her.

Oh, they had no business to be here in this hot, crowded room, jostled by she often wondered how he could find , furs and velvets, simple, open air blossoms that they were! No one apparently was aware of them save herself and the girl in blue, who had drawn one from the jar and was pulling it to

A woman came across the room, set her cup down upon the table, smiled

"I have something to tell you which I just now heard on the best authority," she said. "You have lost your wager, my dear boy. Love wins. Miss after all."

"Is that possible?" he exclaimed. "I would not have believed it of her."

"Nor I. Thank you no more tea, my dear Miss Verrel. I am just leaving." She made her adieus and passed on gayly. Mildred's eyes, with a new expression in them, were again on the girl in blue. He turned sharply.

"You would do it yourself?" "Yes," Mildred said. He studied her a moment. "Yes, I believe you would," he said, but in your case there are no parallel circumstances. May I come tomorrow when you are alone, dear, and explain to you what I mean?" Mildred turned white, but she faced him bravely. "No," she gesped. "No. It would be of no use. You see, I have just made up my mind to go home tomorrow. It's the best place for me. I think, and they want me, father and my mother and"- She stopped abruptly, with a vivid blush. "Ah, I see!" Hills Hubbard said. He looked very straight before him for an PRACEGAL HEALTH HINT. Rigg's Disease.

The mouth disease that is most often responsible for general ill health is Rigg's disease (Pyorrhea alveolaris), but other forms of inflammation, such as an abscess at the root of the tooth, can also do mischief. The abscess may cause no pain or apparent inflammation, yet it may do a good deal of harm if the pus it forms passes into the blood stream. Among the many diseases which in certain cases can be traced to inflammation of the gums or tooth sockets are dyspepsia, rheumatism, anaemia; high blood pressure with resulting headnche or even heart and kidney disease, constipation and asthma, Possibly we may include ulger of the stomach or intestines, gallstones and appendicitis. Of course, all these conditions are more frequently owing to other causes, but it is well to remember that they can originate in an ill kept mouth. Too often, unfortunately, we see broken and decayed teeth, loose and covered with tartar, in the mouths of persons who are in. other respects careful in regard to personal hygiene. When the physician examines such a mouth be usually finds the gums 'swollen with a blue line along the edge of the teeth, and a very slight pressere will force out pus from between the teeth. As long as such a condition is present it is not much use to treat obscure general symptoms of ill health. Thorough treatment by a competent dentist is the first thing to insist on.

Bowser's Winter Scheme

It Met the Fate of Many Other Great Ideas.

By M. QUAD. Copyright, 1914, by Associated Liter-ary Press:

After dinner, during which he had seemed much preoccupied, Mr. Bowser had passed through the kitchen into the back yard and poured about two pails of water into an empty barrel. The cook looked at him suspiciously from the half open door, and Mrs. Bowser wondered what he was up to, but nothing was said until he had kicked off his shoes and settled down for the evening. He had been aching for ten minutes to be questioned when Mrs. Bowser observed:

"Are you going to shut the water off from the street to make repairs to the pipes?"

"Not that I know of," he replied. "Look here, now, but I want to tell you something, and I don't want you to shout 'Fad!' over it and call me a fool. I think I've got hold of a big thing. In fact, I believe I am about to produce a boon for all mankind." "Going to turn water into cider vine-

"I hope there's something in it." "Something in it! My dear woman, where I start with one barrel of water I'll end up with ten barrels of gold! Your words of encouragement have flone wonders for me. I must now go to the drug store after a few ingredients." He went, and he returned with three bottles and a gallon jug, the contents of which were poured into the barrel. Mrs. Bowser still further encouraged him by coming downstairs to see him pour and stir and mix, and the cook was kind enough to remark that Mr. Bowser looked like a man who would not knowingly blow up or set fire to his own house in order to kill off a poor working girl at $15 per month. It was an hour before the experiment was ready. The dead sailor's manuscript and the hard up man's advice were to the effect that the mixture need not stand over ten minutes, but Mr. Bowser wanted to make a sure thing of it. The stuff had a rank, acid smell, but he sniffed at it as heartily as if it had been cologne. great deal of solemnity he dipped a stick with a sponge tied to the end of it in the barrel and sopped it over the ice. There was no explosion or sudden outburst of flame. Even the cat tiptoed forward and smelled of the chunk. Of course ice won't melt as quickly as snow, and in his own mind Mr. Bowser gave that chunk three minutes to vanish off the cold earth. The liquid honeycombed it and threw out a tanyard odor, but there was no melting.

"What seems to be the matter?" Mrs. Bowser finally queried,

"I-I may not have put enough on," replied Mr. Bowser as he renewed the sop with liberal hand. "There can't be any mistake in the mixing, and the thing is bound to work. Can't you keep that blamed cat away?"

The cat was chased away, and there was another painful period of waiting. The ice could be heard crackling, and it freckled up like a schoolma'am in summer, but there was no melting.

"Perhaps the discovery only alluded to very soft snow," suggested Mrs.

"Soft snow be hanged!" he shouted. "I tell you this thing is all right. The stuff I put in cost $1.50, and it's bound

"Then why don't it work? And it it cost $1.50 for two pailfuls, how are you going to remove snow for a cent a ton? I hope you have got a good thing, but it strikes me"-

"Oh, yes; you are always being struck!" he interrupted. "And this very minute you are hoping I will make a failure of this thing. But I won't, though. Perhaps it needs more stirring."

He seized the stick and stirred and swirled and poked, and again the chunk of ice was doped. The smell was ranker, but that was the only re-

"Perhaps the dying sailor left the wrong manuscript," said Mrs. Bowser quietly, by way of breaking the pain-

"Why don't he take a teakettle of "You know what snow is, of course. hot water to melt it?" queried the

> "By the living jingo, but she'll work or bust!" shouted Mr. Bowser as a wave of anger surged over him. "Stand back there and gimme more room!"

> He seized the barrel with a strong grip and upended it over the chunk of ice and then gave it a kick that sent it flying across the yard. Mrs. Bowser and the cook had retreated to a safe distance, but the cat had advanced to satisfy her feline curiosity. As the barrel went rolling the cat scream ed out and began jumping up and down, but in half a minute changed from jumping to a wild career about the yard.

> "You ought to be ashamed to kick a cat!" exclaimed Mrs. Bowser as the cavorting went on.

> "I never kicked her!" he replied. a club till I drive her over the fence!" He was looking about for a weapon when he gave a sudden start. Then he uttered an exclamation and tried to lift both feet off the ground at once. Then he kicked off his shoes and seemed to start in pursuit of the cat, and he had circled the yard twice

"Water-a pail of water-my feet!" he howled, and as soon as the water was drawn he plunged his feet into

"Now, then, will you explain this circus?" asked Mrs. Bowser as a look of relief came to his face.

"The acid got to my feet," he replied. "There was a gallon of acid, you know. The cat must have stepped into a pud-

Mrs. Bowser got out the bottle of sweet oil and some rags, and the blistered feet were made comfortable, and their sole owner and proprietor hobbled upstairs and stretched himself out on the lounge. Mrs. Bowser hadn't called him a funatic or an idiot, but he felt that he had lost prestige and must regain it. She was still cuddling him when he sat up and pointed a finger at her and hoarsely whis-

"All about melting snow?" she inno-

"All about why my experiment was a failure. Don't seek to hide your guilt by looking at me in that boldfaced way. While I was gone to the drug store you sneaked down and put salt or ashes or vinegar or something

"How foolish of you!"

"That will do! Denials are useless. You can go home to your mother by the 10:20 train tomorrow, and my lawyer will notify you of the legal steps I take. Woman, avaunt and leave your victim to die in peace!"

And, having squared himself and accounted for the failure of his experiment, Mr. Bowser drew up his legs and fell into a peaceful slumber.

Points for Mothers

New Thought Playrooms.

An interesting room in one New York home is known as the "do. do room." It is a completely equipped playroom for the children, where the word don't is never heard.

The idea of this juvenile paradise originated with the father of the fami ly, whose childhood was marred by continually hearing "Don't do this" or "Don't break that."

The room itself is a large, sunny place, ventilated by plenty of windows, which are safely barred. One end of the hardwood floor is uncovered, while the other has a thick woolen rug. fastened so securely that acrobatic feats. ball games or any amount of running and jumping cannot loosen it.

The walls, which are deadened, so that noises cannot penetrate to other parts of the house, are covered with a blue paper, from which finger prints may easily be washed. The pictures and electric lights are caged, this precaution also making possible a mild game of baseball or any amount of handball or bean bag tossing

The chairs and the tables are made with rounded corners. The fear of breaking dainty bric-a-brac does not bother the inmates of this "do, do room," where there are only a few brass bowls to hold odds and ends There are no frail bookcuses with glass doors and silk curtains, but built in affairs to hold the favorite magazines and books

On the spacious broad couch is a substantial blue coverlet that will permit any amount of lounging.

Winning a Boy's Confidence.

Mothers must remember in choosing a boy's associates that very often the boy with the best manners is not the one with the finest character. Often children from the finest families are deceitful and to be avoided just as much as the rougher boys. Good man ners are an excellent thing for a boy to have, but an upright, fine character is a far more important possession.

If the mother teaches her boy to make her his confidant all will be well. She should never be too busy to disten to his recitat of the day's events, big and small. An hour for confidences each evening will save her no end of worry and anxiety, for, if the boy has formed the habit of telling her every thing he will constantly need her sym pathy and her love, and he will conceal nothing from her. In this way the mother can judge for herself as to his companions and his customs.

This formation period in the boy's character is the time when he has greater need of his mother's watchful care and surveillance than any other time, and the mother will be spared much sorrow and anxiety during his adolescence if she will watch over him and his friends in his early youth

School Children's Luncheon.

The greater part of a school child's day is spent inside the schoolrooms, and the little pupil must be watched to see that he receives the proper amount of autrition and outdoor exercise.

The average mother has no idea what her little son or daughter eats at the noon hour, and in many cases she would receive a shock if she knew what stuff they were putting into their stomachs when out of her sight.

Sometimes the mother gives the school child a certain sum with which to buy his lunch at school and asks no questions as to what is bought. This system is very wrong. The noon meal should by all rights be the big meal of the day for children. It is a bad idea to load the little stomachs heavily at night before retiring. The dinner should be eaten at noon.

Some schools have lunch counters, to be sure at which not soup, cocoa, sandwiches, etc., can be obtained, but very few children spend their money on these beneficial foods. They usual ly invest it in cakes, cookies and choc-

Children's Hobbies. Parents nowadays are fully alive to the advantages of hobbies for their children The little hobby hunter need never be dull

Best of all hobbies for children is the care of pets Somehow children all the world over are alike in this respect. However fond they may be of games and toys, there is nothing that gives them so much real delight as something alive to tend, something de pendent upon them for care.

Royal children are no exception to this rule Most of the little princes and princesses of Europe have some animal pets, and most of them go in for some other kind of hobby, such as photography, stamp collecting and other pleasant and instructive pastimes.

The Pain of Burns.

The pain of burns can be allayed by soaking the injured part in a strong solution of washing soda. This is a very simple first aid treatment, which is always available in the home where there are children, and it should be used as soon as possible. When the injured part is well soaked the burn should be covered with a thick layer of ganze wet with boric acid, which not only prevents the air acting upon the burn and making it more painful, but assists the healing of the wounded flesh.

"Shakespeare anticipated by many years the psychology of the times when he said. 'It is the mind that makes the body rich. An eminent modern writer has given utterance to the same truth more fully and more helpfully. perhaps, in the following: The prevailing state of mind or character of thought shapes the body and tentures. It makes us ugly or pleasing, attractive or repulsive, to others. Our thought shapes our gestures; our man-

"The least movement of muscle has a mood of mind, a thought behind it. A mind always determined has always a determined walk. A mind always weak, shifting, vacillating and uncertain makes a shuffling, shambling, uncertain gait. The spirit of determination braces every muscle. It is the thought element of determination filling every muscle. . . If you send from you in thought the elements of worry, fret, hatred or grief you are putting in action forces injurious to your mind and body. * * * Look at the dicontented, gloomy, melancholy and ill tempered men or women and you will see on their faces proofs of the action of the stient force of their unpleasant thought cutting, carving and shaping them into their present expression. Such people are never in good health, for the force acts on them as a poison and creates some form of disease.' "

To Have Pink Cheeks. Pink cheeks are the result of good circulation, no more or no less. Good circulation means an active condition of all bodily functions. Where there is great fatigue, nervousness, or, on the other hand, languid, sluggish bodily activities, whether from a too lazy life or weakness, then the circulation is not all that it should be. We see then pallor or a pasty look, or displeasing and positive sallowness or a settled bluish look which speaks of actual ill health. None of these things can by any means give the cheeks the becoming hue of rosy pinkness.

Each woman is a law unto berself, and general directions cannot be laid down for all. The weak, pale and nervous woman sometimes thinks she "cannot stand" the daily cool shower. into a glow. Sometimes she really "cannot stand it." yet sometimes that very weakness must be faced and overcome. At first such methods may seem to leave her more weak and almost trembling, but if she will persist she will note that these unpleasant symptoms are disappearing and that her strength as well as her color is improving every day. Such a woman has become weak and pale just because she has succumbed to the thought that that was her part and lot in life. But, resisting it, she rises into better health plexions at this season of the year. Let it be clearly understood that pimples are not caused by frosty. damp, dry, hot or, in fact, any other kind of weather, but make their appearance in direct connection with an unsatisfactory condition of the blood or digestion or the general health. You may lessen the inflamed appearance of a "beauty spot" by the application of a lotion, but you can only remove it and the cause as well as the probability of a further appearance of the eruptions by getting the blood into a healthy state. What, then, is the treatment? Eat fruit at every meal and plenty of it. Drink copious draughts of cold water, fresh and filtered. Take a constitutional and a brisk rubdown before breakfast every morning

The Business Woman's Looks. Under the stress and strain of a business or professional life a woman's beauty soon fades. While interest in her work may keep her mind alert, the sedentary life, the confinement in office or shop, the lack of exercise, all conspire to chase the roses from her cheeks, the brightness from her eye and clasticity from her movements. The appearance of youth and health is a desirable quality. It is of first requisite in business The woman who looks well, who demands respect by her personality, has the battle half won. We are inclined to listen to what she says with interest and to accept what she has to offer with confidence. Indeed, any woman who does not guard her appearance will fail to make a success of business

=The Universalist Sunday school had a "Hallowe'en Mixture" on Thursday, the 29th ult., which was a howling success. It included a fair, with tables conducted by the different classes, all of which were patronized to the limit, weird mysteries presided over by witches that came from ages long ago, and the most modern and up-to-date ghosts produced by students from Harvard and Tech. The chairman of the general committee was Miss Mildred Merrill, who proved perfectly competent. The assisting ladies in charge of the several departments were:-

Food, Miss Olive Herseltine; witch tent, Miss Pauline Winp; novelties, Miss Katharine Yerrinton; candy, Miss Jennie Frost; postal cards, Miss Elizabeth Yerrinton; ice cream, Rev. Frank L. Masseck; punch, Ralph Green-leaf; peanuth, Miss Bertha Yerrinton; pop-corn, Miss Carol Masseck.

All kinds of Hallowe'en games were played, and the entertainment consisted of stories by the Sunday school class of Frederick A. Hortter, those taking part being Osgood Holt, Clayton Hilliard, Hc ratio Lamson and Irving Dawes.

The most important of the theatrical announcements made to date concerns the first Boston appearance of the celebrated English actor manager, Mr. Cyril Maude and his all English company from his London playhouse, at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston, starting Monday evening, November 9th. Mr. Maude's wonderful success last season, when he remained the entire season at Wallack's Theatre, New York, is well known. Mr. Maude came to this country lightly heralded, and in one night he made for himself and company a reputation never before equalled by any star, English or American. Mr. Maude will present "Grumpy," which created such a furore in New York, a new kind of detective play. The play was written by Horace Hodges and T. Wigney Percyville. Mr. Percyville msy best be remembered for his clever performance as the kindly old parson in "Pomander Walk." Mr. The young will come from the American of the country of the same should not be allowed.
